

1. Really touching topic on the holocaust, but I enjoyed that step up, learning about it ... really emotional... how people could treat another religion so badly... got me interested... I never really heard about it... I'm glad I learned about it... you should be aware
2. I look at science and religion together I think I look at both and try and find answers through both – science agrees with one, and religion agrees with one..... (Pupil F asked what one question would you ask God) Is there life after death one of the main ones... everyone fears death... everyone so sad... everyone is unsure... no one can come back to just one of the big questions for everyone, not just me, definitely a big one for me...
3. "Science and religious studies... offer two views of similar questions – either way both... support ideas, there isn't a view of religious beliefs in how the world could be created, god could do this, that, science – there are answers... in RE"
4. The facts do support the idea that smoking can be really bad for you... My dad passed away cause of smoking, cancer... that has affected me... if it was someone else they could have a different point of view.
5. I looked at the (Buddhist) way of life... it enlightens you a bit really... you can do this and that and it can make you a better person... // how they focus on the present, never the future, I quite like that... a calmer personality... I liked that... I wish I could do that...
6. Open your mind a little... Maybe if you're an atheist... Religion does have lots of evidence that supports it... it could have happened... you've got to look from two points of view... I like that.
7. I do think personal accounts help you when you write about religious views... it makes you relate more personally... makes you feel how this way of life works... but I would say the arguments because there are so many views... you can look at William Paley and how that related to the watch... Aquinas creation idea, how this could start the world... designed, created, really interesting one side and the other and you have great fun...
8. What would you expect different about Buddhist footballer? I think cos of the teaching about peace... no riots, no cheating cos they've been practising to do good, there'd be no footballers wives... the money would definitely go to the poor the people... there'd be a lot more better if we had more Buddhists....
9. I really think you should learn about RE... you might be in the situation... when you need to understand... interesting and incredibly useful as well.
